

Putting Wisdom to Work in the World

Imagine a new kind of university that teaches collaboration and harmony in the world, that educates experienced professionals to reach across borders of all kinds—international, cultural, socio-economic, religious, and political—for the common good.

Imagine a new generation of skillful leaders who are ethically grounded and socially responsible ...

You've just imagined Claremont Lincoln University, an innovative values-based, not-for-profit graduate school that prepares leaders across the private, public and social sectors for the realities of an increasingly interconnected world. At Claremont Lincoln, students learn to integrate the personal with the professional to create a more sustainable world in a global era.

MASTER OF ARTS IN Ethical Leadership

In the 20th century, the typical MBA prepared professionals like you for a lifetime of work and advancement. But the world changed. Today, we live in a more migratory, more diverse, more global world. Effective leaders need to be keenly aware of those around them, acutely aware of themselves, and possess the tools and techniques that can help an organization identify its ethical shortcomings and move forward to a socially sustainable future.

The M.A. in Ethical Leadership is an opportunity for you to become a 21st century change-agent. As a student in this unique new program, you will integrate personal awareness, professional proficiencies and global consciousness to help you be more effective in your professional setting. With these contemporary skills and perspectives, you will be a more effective motivator, negotiator and creative force for change in your enterprise.

Claremont Lincoln knows ethical leadership is more than a code of conduct. It's a set of solutions. A foundation for sustainable success. And, most importantly, a way of life.

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

The M.A. in Ethical Leadership is carefully designed to teach working professionals like you—leaders who are already trained in your field—to be more effective and ethically aware leaders in a diverse and globalized world. This fully accredited program leads you through a unique series of 10 online courses that integrate personal awareness and concrete professional skills with a contemporary global consciousness for more skillful leadership in any organizational context.

Students begin the program by taking the Leadership Practices Inventory®, a highly effective instrument for professional assessment, which is the foundation for learning new practices for self-awareness, mindfulness and attentiveness to others. Students then learn about foundations for ethical awareness and decision-making from various wisdom traditions across the ages—Eastern and Western, philosophical and religious. Toward the end of the program, students gain concrete skills in areas such as conflict resolution, cross-cultural communication, organizational analysis, and management in diverse settings for leading with integrity and effectiveness.

As a graduate of this program, you ultimately will be better prepared to lead your organization toward a more ethical, socially sustainable future.

COURSES

These 10-week courses are taken in this sequence.

- Personal and Vocational Assessment
- Attention in an Age of Distraction
- Ethical Frameworks: From Spiritual to Secular

- Ethics and Globalization
- Leadership Skills for the Global Office
- From Conflict to Solution
- Rethinking Money and Meaning
- Integrating Personal and Professional Ethics
- Leadership Capstone: Putting Ethics to Work

THE GATHERING

Four times a year, at the beginning of each new microterm, students and alumni are invited to Claremont for "the Gathering," a private networking event on Friday nights that invites you to meet faculty, staff and other students face-to-face. The Gathering also features a presentation by a dynamic thought-leader who exemplifies ethical leadership in his or her field. As a student and alumnus, you will always be welcome to drop in on the Gathering and join the conversation.

On Saturdays following the Gathering, new students will have a day-long, hands-on orientation to the program that includes introductions to the learning management system and other institutional systems and processes.

Students will also have access to a private online network—along with faculty, fellow students, and Gathering presenters—that offers support, consultation, and networking during and after the program.

FORMAT

All courses are offered entirely online through an industry standard course management system that is easy to use, educationally effective and accessible on mobile devices. This online format allows you to set your own schedule and complete assignments when it is most convenient for you.

COSTS

Affordably priced at $1,500 per course, the entire program costs $15,000, making it highly competitive with other advanced leadership programs. After you pay a $50 application fee, you will only be responsible for the tuition for each course, the cost of books, a nominal fee to cover your graduation expenses, and a one-time trip to Claremont for the Gathering and orientation.
